ABOUT THE LUTTERWORTH PRESS

The Lutterworth Press is one of the longest-established independent British publishing houses. We have been trading since the late eighteenth century and have built up a world-wide reputation for publishing high quality books written by distinctive authors.

Originally founded as the Religious Tract Society, publishing activity was originally related to the areas of religion and children's literature, and the Press published such perennial favourites as The Boy's Own paper and the Girl's Own Paper. It soon added educational and adult non-fiction.

We aim for the highest quality, blending information, instruction and high production standards, to present the best of non-fiction.

Jesus and Pocahontas
Gospel, Mission, and National Myth
Howard A. Snyder

Paperback	9780718894191
	£17.95 $35.90 € 26.93
PDF	9780718844455
	£14.45 $28.90 € 21.68

A re-examination of the story of Pocahontas, probing behind the self-serving myths to reveal a complex tale that sheds light on the interplay between Christian mission and culture.

Howard Snyder has succeeded in showing how under the spell of ethnocentrism, Pocahontas (1596-1617) became a nationalistic American myth... Beyond that however, he has succeeded in making of the Pocahontas story an insightful case study in the close interrelation that there is between the Christian mission and culture.

The Virtues and Vices in the Arts
A Sourcebook
Shawn R. Tucker (editor)

Paperback	9780718894047
	£22.00 $44.00 € 33.00
PDF	9780718844103
	£18.50 $37.00 € 27.75

An anthology of literary extracts and artistic images exploring the notion of virtue and vice in Western culture throughout the ages, from the Classical and Biblical eras to the twentieth century.

Shawn Tucker demonstrates how the concepts of virtue and vice are not only very relevant to contemporary Western culture but have a comprehensive, fluid, and contested history in art and literature. This interdisciplinary study of these core cultural concepts, and a serious inquiry into what behaviour we sanction and what behaviour we condemn, is a welcome addition to the study of humanities.

Kindle	9780718844394
	£12.38 $24.76 € 18.57

Our culture has been shaped and reshaped by two dominating aspects of the English language, Shakespeare and the Bible. Jem Bloomfield explores how these towering figures have permeated through our culture, their interpretations and reinterpretations across the eras.

Engagingly written and full of surprising insights, Words of Power argues for the overlap between how these texts are approached in both popular and scholarly culture. Bloomfield takes concepts from biblical scholarship and fruitfully explores how they can be used to challenge preconceptions about the way that both Shakespeare and the Bible should be read.

An ethnographic and pastoral study of how followers of Christ's teachings in India have formed their own ecclesial structures while retaining their Hindu and Sikh heritages.

Duerksen has taken the risk of listening carefully to believers who most evangelicals would dismiss as heretical, of seeking to understand theologically the ways in which these believers have negotiated the tensions between their cultural heritage and the gospel, and then of embracing their ecclesial solutions to this tension as part of the historical process of God's building His church.

	£15.00 $30.00 € 22.50
PDF	9780718844257
	£11.50 $23.00 € 17.25

A selection of writings on scripture, faith and the nature of Christian scholarship, by one of America's foremost New Testament scholars and theologians.

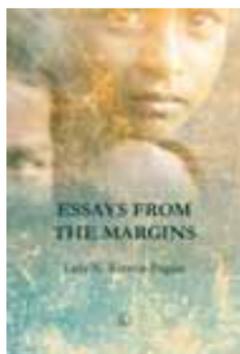

For more than a half a century, Lee Keck has combined first-rate NT scholarship, theological acumen, and a passion for the church. Keck's dialogue between historical critical inquiry and the contemporary relevance of the biblical text is as important for those who feel little need to take the biblical text seriously as it is for those who refuse to recognize its limits. This collection of addresses and sermons is exemplary in demonstrating how scholarship can serve the church. I endorse it whole heartedly.

A theologically astute exploration of the varieties of masculinity, both historical and contemporary, through the lens of the psychoanalytic concept of sublimation.

This is an intriguing, important, and timely book on multiple masculinities depicted through the prism of the concept of sublimation. Carlin and Capps, using biblical and contemporary examples, invite the reader toward a more complex, flexible, and deeper understanding of the varied ways men sublimate their erotic desires with other men and women. Indeed, the book itself is an illustration of the sublimation of sexual instincts, revealed in the shared serious and playful scholarship and friendship of these authors.

Combining a love of the music with up-to-date biblical and theological scholarship, this is an exploration of the Blues as a mirror to the message of the Christian gospel.

The Gospel According to the Blues is at once a primer in American music, culture, and race and religious history. Gary Burnett moves deftly from lyrics to theory and back again, from Blind Lemon Jefferson to the insights of contemporary scholarship. Highly readable, thoroughly researched, and with deep respect for the art form on every page. For best results, read with scratchy vinyl recordings of the masters as accompaniment.

An analysis of the role of healing in the New Testament and in early Christianity that aims to rediscover the spiritual basis of the healing ministry of the Church.

We badly need this kind of patient exposition: the Church can easily be caught between waves of uncritical optimism about healing and a sceptical and rather sterile attitude. Here we have a resource that will take the discussion to a deeper and far more informed level.

Our Bodies Are Selves is a look at what it means to be human in a world where medical technology and emerging ethical insight force us to rethink the boundaries of humanity/spirit and man/machine.

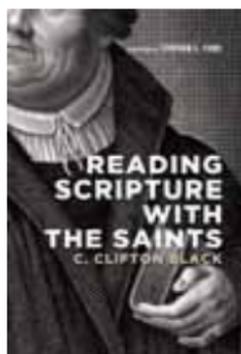

In Our Bodies Are Selves, I found a compendium of perspectives reacting upon the longing to find ourselves again at home in our bodies—to challenge the commonly held ‘assumption that body and self are two separate things,’ and to locate body-selves again within Christian theological tradition.

A collection of essays exploring the ways in which theatre and drama are providing conceptual models of use to a growing number of theologians.

It is one thing to say that ethics is 'performative' or that the incarnation is 'theatrical'. It is another thing to presume that these sorts of statements are self-evidential, when they are far from it. This collection of essays offers us a clear-headed and stimulating treatment of the various ways in which 'theatre' orients the work of Christian theology. This is a very welcome volume for both academy and church.
