Renunciation of ordinances	62

	PAGE
Renunciation of national distinctions	63
Opinion respecting the Scriptures as an authority	64
Opinion respecting studies, amusements, language	64

SECTION IV.—PRACTICAL WORKING OF THE QUAKER SYSTEM.

What evidence is admissible on this subject	65
Quaker attempts at spiritual purity, why abortive	66
Quaker attempts at universality, why abortive	68
Quaker attempts at education, contradictory to the principle in which the Society stands	69
Quaker protest against the world ineffectual	70
Final issue of the Quaker experiment	73

CHAPTER II

PURE PROTESTANTISM

SECTION I.—THE LEADING PRINCIPLES OF THE REFORMATION.

Martin Luther—The processes of his mind—Idea of Justification by Faith	74
Second Reformation principle— Election —How connected with the first—How far characteristic of Calvin	77
Third Reformation principle— Authority of the Scriptures —Its relation to the two others—Its connection with Zuinglius	78
Fourth Reformation principle— Distinction of nations and Rights of sovereigns —Its connection with the previous history of Europe—With the other signs of the Reformation	80

SECTION II.—OBJECTIONS TO THE PRINCIPLES OF THE REFORMATION CONSIDERED.

The objections to the Lutheran doctrine of JUSTIFICATION, as exalting an outward Object of Faith	84
Objection to the same doctrine, as involving the idea of Satisfaction and Propitiation	87
Objection to the same doctrine, as mistaking the Act of Conversion for a theological principle	90
Objection to the same doctrine, as substituting individual Con- sciousness for the universal Atonement	97
Objection to the Calvinistic doctrine of ELECTION, as interfering with the acknowledgment of men's relation to the Living Word	99
Objection to the same doctrine, as interfering with human Obedience	100
Objection to the same doctrine, as substituting the selection of Individuals for the selection of a Body	101
Objection to the Reformation doctrine, respecting the Bible, as interfering with the acknowledgment of an Inward Light	101

Objection to the same doctrine, as asserting the right of private Judgment	104
Objection to the same doctrine, as attributing the teachings of the Spirit to individuals, and not to a body	106
The doctrine of the Reformation respecting Nations	106

SECTION III.—PROTESTANT SYSTEMS.

Lutheranism—How it became a system—Joint influence of Luther and Melancthon	108
Calvinism, the essentially Protestant system—Development of it	110
Zuinglianism—Its principle—Its negative character	112
Arminianism—Its relation to Protestantism and to Popery	112

SECTION IV.—THE PRACTICAL WORKINGS OF THE PROTESTANT SYSTEMS.

Luther's feelings respecting his own work	113
How formularies became important to the Lutheran	115
Reaction of spiritual feelings against them	116
Fictions of Lutheranism	116
Reaction of common sense against them	118
Calvinism in its strength	119
Continental Calvinism	121
Scotch Calvinism	122
English Calvinism	126
Final result of the pure Protestant experiment	127

CHAPTER III

UNITARIANISM

1. Change in the opinion of Protestants during the 18th century respecting the character and importance of those principles which are not peculiar to themselves	128
2. Change of opinion respecting the source of knowledge	129
3. Change of opinion respecting the origin and principles of society	130
The positive side of Unitarianism	131
Effect of natural studies in leading to an impatience of every doctrine which seemed to contradict the idea of the Divine Unity	131
Or to involve any qualification of the Divine benevolence	133
Or to represent the condition of Humanity as wholly lost	135
Attempted confutation of the positive parts of Unitarianism, why unsuccessful	136
Its negative elements, how connected with them.	137
Their essential contradiction to each other	138
Final result of the Unitarian experiment	140

CHAPTER IV

ON THE TENDENCY OF THE RELIGIOUS, PHILOSOPHICAL, AND POLITICAL MOVEMENTS WHICH HAVE TAKEN PLACE IN PRO-
TESTANT BODIES SINCE THE MIDDLE OF THE LAST CENTURY

SECTION I.—THE RELIGIOUS MOVEMENTS.

	PAGE
Methodism—How far a reassertion of the Protestant principle	142
In what respects it stood upon a different ground	143
Attempts at an extra-national religious ORGANISATION	147
Attempts to discover a wider THEOLOGY than that which is founded upon mere Protestant principles, in Germany, America, and Scotland	149
Attempts to form a New Catholic Church	156

SECTION II.—PHILOSOPHICAL MOVEMENTS.

Materialism of the 18th century	158
How it affected religious men	158
A gradual revolution	159
Its connection with religious feelings and principles	161

Change in the feelings of Protestants respecting monarchical government	185
Puritan colonies in North America	186
Progress towards the French Revolution—Ordinary Parisian philosophy—Philosophy of Rousseau—Glorification of NATURE	187
Effects of the French Revolution upon Protestant countries— Assertion of the superiority of LAW to NATURE	190
Recent reaction against these effects—Assertion of the superiority of WILL to LAW.	191
Consequence of this reaction	193
The French Revolution, an attempt to establish a UNIVERSAL POLITY	194
Reaction against this attempt in Protestant countries	195
Renewal of the attempt in different forms, Benthamism, St. Simonianism, Owenism	196

Contents

23

	PAGE
Result of these experiments	203
Rousseau's doctrine of EDUCATION—Reaction against it in Protestant countries	203
More recent feelings on the subject, grounded on the actual circumstances of Society	204
Spiritual tendency of these feelings; the acknowledged object of Education to obtain a dominion over the human will	206
Effort of States to obtain a control over Education—at variance with this feeling—how justified	208

Part 33

OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH AND THE ROMISH SYSTEM

CHAPTER I

RECAPITULATION

Popular modern notion respecting the gradual Substitution of the IDEAL for the PERSONAL and HISTORICAL in religious systems	213
Is it supported by the failure of the Quaker system?	213
Is it supported by the failure of the Protestant systems?	215
Is it supported by the failure of the Unitarian system?	218
Popular modern notion respecting the substitution of an Idea for a SPIRITUAL SOCIETY—Is it borne out by the failure of the Reformers, the Quakers, the Unitarians, modern Philosophers, to establish a united society?	219
Popular modern notion that there may be a universal society not grounded upon REVELATION	223
Is it borne out by the history of Quakerism, Calvinism, Unitarianism?	224
Is it borne out by the discoveries of recent philosophers?	225
Popular modern notion that there may be a universal society not governed by an actual KING	226
Is it borne out by the history of Quakerism, pure Protestantism, Unitarianism?	226

CHAPTER II

INDICATIONS OF A SPIRITUAL CONSTITUTION

The existence of FAMILIES treated as unimportant by religious sects and by philosophers	229
The fact that they do exist, the first indication that a spiritual ORDER is appointed for men—and yet belongs to them as voluntary creatures	230

The fact that NATIONS exist, a second indication of the same truth—How connected with the foregoing	233
Indication of a feeling in men after a more comprehensive Society	236

CHAPTER III

THE SCRIPTURAL VIEW OF THIS CONSTITUTION

Character of the Bible not systematic, but methodical	238
Idea of a covenant between God and man, the central one in it—This covenant first with a family	239
Secondly, with a nation —Development of the nation out of the family	241
Wherein the nation was distinct from the family	242
How the nation was identified with the family	244
Attempts at Babylonian and universal monarchy—How resisted by the Jewish nation	245
Vision of a true UNIVERSAL KINGDOM, of which this was the counterfeit and perpetual enemy	246
The New Testament begins with the announcement of a KINGDOM	248
Charge against this language that it is Jewish, considered	249
Connection of this kingdom with the old Jewish kingdom	249
Effects of the proclamation of this kingdom upon different classes of the Jews	251
How interpreted by the acts of our Lord's life	252
The establishment of a Kingdom grounded upon a NAME—The consummation of the gospel history	254
Development of this idea through the Acts of the Apostles and the different Epistles	254

CHAPTER IV

SIGNS OF A SPIRITUAL SOCIETY

Question to be considered	260
-------------------------------------	-----

SECTION I.—BAPTISM.

Statement of the fact—Use and prevalency of this sign	261
Is it connected in the Gospels with the Kingdom which our Lord came to establish?	261
Inference— The baptized man is a member of Christ's spiritual and universal Kingdom	263
Quaker objections to this inference—"A spiritual fact cannot be denoted by an outward sign"—"It is false to give the sign to one who has not the reality"—"The sign is useless to a man who is already united to the Divine Word"—The Quaker's interpretation of John's Baptism	265

Contents

	PAGE
Antipædobaptist objection—"Those who have no spiritual consciousness or capacity cannot be admitted to baptism"	268
Modern Protestant objection—"There are two kingdoms, one outward and one inward—Baptism admits to the first, Conversion to the second"	273
Modern philosophical objections—"Baptism cannot be the sign of a universal society, it belongs to the members of a certain religious sect"—"It does not distinguish the wise from the unwise"—"It involves the acknowledgment of an incomprehensible dogma"—"It presumes the existence of an evil Spirit"	279
The ROMISH SYSTEM—Idea of the opus operatum	287
Why this idea is in direct opposition to that which has been set forth in this section.	288
The Catholic and Romish doctrine found side by side in the same writers—How to distinguish them	291
